LATTER FEAR THE FATHE".

Judge Truax May Have to Give a Solomon-Like Decision.

Shrill cries of mingled grief and anger echoed through the gloomy old County Court-House at noon to-day and sent clerks and court officers on the run to Justice Truax's court-room in Part II. Soon the corridor was jammed with big crowd of lawyers and clients attracted by the uproar.

The excitement was occasioned by flerce struggle between Joseph and Bella Leo, husband and wife, for the posses don of their two children, Nellie, aged four, and Louis, two years old. The little ones had been brought into court in answer to a writ of habeas corpus obtained by the father. Justice Truax intimated that he would ve the children to the father, and Leo once grabbed up the little boy. At that the girl screamed and sprang like wildcat at her father, trying to drag her little brother away. Then Mrs. Leo took a hand, assisted by her mother and sister, and for a few moments the fur flew. the whole family weeping and shouting their father.

"I will adjourn this case till Saturday, he said, "and propose to look into it. There must be some good reason for the fear of these children." fear of these children."

The Leos were mafried in 1895. Mrs.

Leo alleges that her husband was brutal to her and she left him on Decoration Day, 1900, and went to live with her parents at No. 85 New Chambers at the contract of the contra bers street.

The children were pretty and bright Jooking, and seemed well cared for and very fond of their mother.

Women Plead Guilty.

Fanny Nichols and Mamie Reed, colored, pleaded guilty to robbing a boy of $25 before Judge Foster in the Court of General Sessions, and were each sentenced to ten years in the Woman's Prison at Auburn. They took their long sentence stoically.

lington, a dream story will form the basis of some of the evidence against the defendant.

Prosecutor Erwin and the attorneys for Barker have all been searching the little town of Arlington for testimory to prove or disprove this particular dream. They finally located the timepiece in a pawnshop on Bedford avenue. While they warned their witnesses to keep quiet, and while the story is said to be known to many in Arlington, it will probably not be told until the trial is actually in progress because of the is actually in progress because of the pawnbroker.

It is said the prosecution expects to show by members of the Woman's Guild of Holy Trinity, Rev. Mr. Keller's church, that Mrs. Barker's vivid recitation of the dream story at a meeting of the Gulid provoked much discussion at the Guild provoked much discussion at the time, and was actually responsible for a breach among members of the Guild which was never healed.

It is affirmed positively that the prosecution relies much upon this dream story to demonstrate to the jury his contention that Mrs. Barker is subject to halluctinations. Counsel for the Barkers have made claborate preparations to bring witnesses in rebuttal, and it is now expected to prove one of the most sensational bits of evidence in the case.

Thomas G. Barker has been keeping indoors since his return from the Hudson County juli, and has apparently determined to arouse no feeling. His friends show their loyalty to him and their belief in the truth of his statements by adding him in the preparation of evidence.

Nearly one-half of the members of Holy Trinity congregation have been not filed by either the prosecution or the defense that they will be wanted as witnesses when the case is called.

The steady improvement in the condition of the Rev. Mr. Keller warrants the belief that the prosecutor will call the case for trial within four weeks.
